

McGill Has World Influence Says Principal Currie

Addresses the Men at Union Smoker Last Night

FOOTBALL HOPES

Coach Burrage and Captain Littlefield Speak—Track and Daily Represented

"You must know yourselves; be fair to those who sent you here," was a declaration made by Sir Arthur Currie last evening at the Union Smoker. These remarks, while applying to the students in general, were especially directed to the freshmen.

Students filled the ballroom to capacity, being eager to hear Sir Arthur for the first time since his return to active work. The supply of free smokes was exhausted by the time the meeting had started.

McGill was not made up merely of a group of buildings bounded by four streets, according to the principal. It was something more; its influence spread all over the world. "Whether its prestige will stand as high in the future as it does now, depends on you. It is a privilege for you to be here. We trust you with that honor and hope you will not forget."

"Our purpose here is to get education, which will draw out and develop our minds, not to cram in knowledge. We are here for more than to learn how to make a living; we are here to learn how to live, and use our influence in the right way."

That education's aim is to make well-rounded men out of students, was Sir Arthur's concluding belief. "Work with the construction gang" (Continued on page four)

Local Man Joins Dalhousie Board

George Henderson Native of Nova Scotia

The Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, following the recommendation of the Board of Governors of Dalhousie University, has appointed a Montreal man, George Henderson, to fill a vacancy on the board. This vacancy occurred when Right Hon. W.S. Fielding died recently.

Mr. Henderson is a former president of the Montreal Board of Trade, and is prominent in business and social circles in Montreal. He was born in Nova Scotia and educated at Dalhousie University. He is well-known throughout his native province.

Dalhousie University was founded in 1813 by the Right Hon. George Ramsay, 9th Earl of Dalhousie. The college is situated at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Fire Does Not Stop Issue Of Indiana Daily Student

Bloomington, Indiana, Oct. 5.—The press must be served! When the University power plant caught fire, The Daily Student's front yard reporters were on the job. But the staff had to go somewhere else to handle the story.

When the campus lights went out, the staff found it impossible to continue work in the Journalism building. A quick change was made to the office of the Evening World, and the staff resumed its work under rushed conditions. They labored on in spite of unfamiliar lodgings so that the public might know.

On with the paper! It is impossible to resume publication from the Journalism building tomorrow, the paper again will be published from the World office. This courtesy has been extended the staff and insures a continued publication of the paper during the time the campus is without electrical power.

C. E. Van Valer, superintendent of the Indiana University Press, last night issued the following statement: "The Indiana Daily Student will not miss an issue. This is due to the generous offer of downtown newspaper plants made at the start of the fire by the owners. As soon as it was realized that the University plant would be out of commission for the time being, all necessary equipment was removed to the Bloomington Evening World, at the invitation of George Turcotte, the publisher."

Dean Corbett At Teachers' Convention

Professor C. E. Corbett, dean of the faculty of law, will speak on "A Decade in International Organization," at the sixty-fifth annual convention of the provincial Association of Protestant Teachers of Quebec, which opens at the Montreal High School next Wednesday. The representative of the McGill Corporation will submit a report at the business meeting in the morning.

An illustrated lecture on Church Architecture will be given by Professor Ramsay Traquair, F.R.I.B.A., of the department of architecture.

The staff of the McGill Library will arrange a collection of children's books in the foyer of the high school, for the benefit of the delegates. The conference will last four days.

NEED EXTRA CARS

Professor Gifford to Address Evening Meeting—Student Speakers

The plans arrived at by the executives of the Student Christian Associations of McGill University and the Royal Victoria College at their week-end conference at Ile aux Chênes will be placed before the members of the S.C.A. and all those interested in its activities at an all day conference tomorrow. The place of meeting is Thornecliffe House, Rosemere.

Transportation to Rosemere will be by means of bus and car. The busses leave Strathcona Hall at 9 a.m., returning by 10 p.m. The maximum cost of the conference, including lunch and supper, will be $1.50. The social committee, composed of A. H. Watier and C. L. Bates, are making preparations for 100 people. Extra cars will be needed, and all those who are willing to co-operate in this respect are asked to notify C. M. Stewart, the secretary in Strathcona Hall.

The principal speaker at the conference will be Professor Gifford of the United Theological College. Professor Gifford, who has spent the past year abroad, will address the final meeting in the evening.

Other features of the gathering will be three addresses delivered by students, on International aspects of the student world. Philip Mathams, editor-in-chief of the Daily, will speak on International Student Service. Mathams attended student conferences in Europe this summer. (Continued on page three)

Miss C. Derrick Leaves McGill

Is First Woman to be Made Professor Emeritus

Miss Carrie M. Derrick, who has been associated with the Botanical Department of the University for more than forty years, is this year severing her active connection with McGill. She has now been made Professor Emeritus. It is noteworthy that the first woman to be appointed to a staff position at McGill should also be the first woman to have the honor of being Professor Emeritus.

Recording Professor Derrick's retirement, the McGill News says: "A woman of many parts Professor Derrick excelled as a teacher, friend, and inspiration to all in her department. She was never satisfied to give less than her best, and she expected the best in return. A truly scientific outlook, wide reading, and much preparation, together with an extraordinary fluency, made her lectures hours of delight to her students. In addition to her work at the university, she has written papers of a scientific nature, which made her name widely known in botanical circles. She is a member of the Botanical Society of America, and was for many years a member of the Marine Biological Laboratory, Wood's Hole, Mass. Lately she has been much interested in the subject of heredity, and as Professor of Comparative Morphology and Genetics has given a comprehensive and balanced course on (Continued on page three)

Conservatorium Has New Head

Douglas Clarke to Take Over Office of Principal

STAFF ADDITIONS

Messrs. Norris and Breault to Give Recital in Moyse Hall

Douglas Clarke, Mus. B., whose appointment as director of the McGill Conservatorium of Music was recently announced by the University, has taken up his duties as head of the department of music at McGill. He outlined in a general way in an interview his plans for the development of the musical talent in the university.

Speaking of his new office at McGill University, Mr. Clarke said that it was naturally impossible for him to make any definite announcement on plans until he had time to confer with other authorities. He outlined, however, his own ambition to use to their fullest possibilities the musical resources of the university. He felt sure that not only among the conservatory students, but also among the general student body of the university, there was a quantity and quality of talent that might enrich the work of the conservatory.

It is his hope to organize a choir which will perform the more considerable choral works. This choir as well as the orchestra which also is planned, will have its nucleus in the conservatory and in the student body, but as many of the younger voices will be limited in training and experience, these organizations will, of necessity, also use the talent of the community. The director made it clear that he had no desire to interfere with the work already being done by other choirs of the city but that he wished to organize one which would have special relation to the university. He stressed his intention of performing the better class of choral and orchestral work.

Several other appointments of marked importance have also been announced at the conservatory. Paul de Marky, Hungarian pianist whose concerts in this city following a brilliant concert career in Europe and America, have given special interest to his master teaching here, is joining the piano department. Harry Norris, for sixteen years musical director of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, and a violinist of note will join the violin department. Victor Breault of Montreal will specialize in the art of singing and repertoire.

The first of a series of recitals scheduled for this fall will be given by Mr. Harry Norris and Mr. Victor Breault at Moyse Hall on Wednesday, October 9, at 8:30 P.M.

Toronto Smoker

The Toronto Graduate Society is having a smoker after the Toronto-McGill game in Toronto on October 19th. The affair will be held in the Royal York Hotel.

WEATHER HALTS TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Poor weather conditions again halted the start of the college tennis tournament yesterday and none of the contestants were able to get going. There is a long entry list for this sport and the undue delay caused by the rain has seriously slowed up the opening of proceedings.

It is hoped that the weather will improve sufficiently to enable the first matches to be played. All men able to play this morning are urged to do so in order to speed up the play.

LAST CALL

Any students who still intend to exchange their coupons for reserved seats in the south stand may do so between 9 and 10 o'clock this morning at the Union Ticket office.

War Memorial Paintings Now In Moyse Hall

Pictures Hung are by Mrs. E. M.B. Warren, A.R.B.A.

LAYING OF COLORS

Sir Arthur Currie and Prince of Wales Among Those Depicted

Some general curiosity has been aroused by the two new pictures in Moyse Hall. These paintings, by Mrs. E. M. B. Warren, A.R.B.A., were only received this summer and have but recently been hung.

They are memorials; the scene depicted represents the ceremony of the deposit of Canadian regimental colours in Westminster Abbey. No colours of any Canadian regiments were taken to France but were left in the Abbey during the war.

In the picture on the west wall the verger is seen placing the colours of the Princess Pat on Wolfe's tomb, the colours already in position being those of the regiments of the First and Second Divisions. Bishop Ryle, Dean of Westminster, is standing directly behind the verger and by his side is the Prince of Wales who for some time was A.D.C. to Sir Arthur Currie.

Most of Canadian war leaders are in these paintings: the Duke of Connaught, General Sir Arthur Currie, Sir Robert Borden and other well-known commanders and ministers of the government.

The colours in the picture on the east wall are those of the Third and Fourth Divisions; the colours of the Royal Canadian Highlanders are being placed on the tomb.

Board Of Trade Offers Courses

Large Increase of Students at 5 O'Clock Lectures

The Board of Trade lecture in Commercial Education has increased the five o'clock lecture in Commerce immensely. The course in book-keeping given by the Board of Trade coincides with the lectures of the Chartered Accountants Association and has raised the attendance to almost 200, thereby heavily taxing the capacity of Room 41 of the Arts Building in which the lectures are given.

The Montreal Board of Trade Commercial Courses have been instituted to provide advanced commercial instruction. They are designed for young men living in Montreal and speaking the English language, who are unable to attend a university and wish to qualify for commercial diplomas or for membership in certain professional societies.

The courses offered prepare students for the following examinations: (a) Examination for the Montreal Board of Trade Diploma for Commercial Education. (b) First and Final Examinations of the Canadian Society of Cost Accountants. (c) Intermediate and Final examinations of the Chartered Institute of Secretaries.

The lectures are given in the evenings, after business hours and are of a practical nature. The subjects which have been selected by experienced men of business include courses in commercial arithmetic and the mathematics of investment, cost accounting and factory organization, elements of commercial law, sale of goods, contracts, negotiable instruments, banking, agency and partnership.

Monkey Still Alive

Seen on Pine Avenue for Short Time

McGill's famous monkey, which has achieved so much notoriety of late, is still alive and well, according to C. R. Bell, a Park Avenue resident, and official of the Monarch Life Insurance Company. Mr. Bell saw the monkey recently near Pine and Cedar avenues.

The animal was in some shrubbery at the side of the street when Mr. Bell saw it. Taking no chances, it quickly disappeared. The monkey escaped from the medical building at McGill University last week when members of the staff were transferring it from one home to another.

McGill Men To Give Lectures In Quebec City

A committee composed of Col. John H. Price, chairman; R. A. Benoit, J. A. Dutcheval and W. G. Mitchell will be in charge.

The first lecture will be given early in November by Dean Ira MacKay of the arts faculty on "The Spirit of Canada." Other lectures will be: Dr. A. S. Lamb, director of the McGill department of physical education, on "The Olympic Games;" Dr. A. S. Sir Arthur To Visit Columbia

To Attend Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of College

LARGE ENROLLMENT

Close to Fifty Thousand Students Registered in Various Departments

Columbia University, New York City, celebrates its hundred and fiftieth anniversary at the end of this month. Sir Arthur Currie will be the McGill representative at the anniversary ceremonies.

Columbia University is one of the oldest and most important of the higher institutions of learning in the United States. It is located on Morningside Heights, in the heart of New York City. Columbia embraces, Columbia College, founded as Kings College in 1754; a school of Medicine (the College of Physicians and Surgeons) founded in 1767 and a school of Law, founded in 1828, besides many other departments.

Kings College opened under the presidency of Dr. Samuel Johnson with a class of eight students and the first Commencement was held on June 21, 1758. During the Revolutionary War activities were suspended at the college due to the buildings being utilized for military purposes. In 1812 by the order of the Supreme Court of the State of New York the corporate title was changed to "The Trustees of Columbia University in the City of New York."

In Columbia may be found students from all parts of the world, and it holds the distinction of having one of the largest enrollments of students of any university. The total number of resident students at Columbia during 1927-28 was 36,688; the non resident students in Home study and University extension numbered 10,706; giving the University a grand total of 47,394 students.

Harvard Honors Varsity President

Harvard has honoured the University of Toronto by inviting Sir Robert Falconer, the president, to come as Ingersoll Lecturer for 1929-30. He will deliver the series of lectures next spring.

Frosh Vanquish Sophs On Track By Large Score

Rain, Cold and Wind Slow Up Track Performances

BOURDEAU STARS

First Year Men Outnumber Opponents Who are Without Drow

Competing under the worst possible weather conditions, the Freshmen downed the Sophomores in yesterday afternoon's track meet by a score of 75 to 45. The Sophs were outnumbered in the entry list and went down to defeat without the services of Drow who was unable to run by reason of having several important lectures in the course of the afternoon.

The moth-eaten subject of the weather came in for plenty of discussion in the course of the afternoon, both from players and from officials. The track after three days of continual rain had been reduced to the consistency of good thick pea soup. On certain stretches, where the top dressing of the track is composed mostly of earthy material rather than cinders, the runners literally sank inches into the mud on every stride.

On the field conditions were, if possible, worse. The all-pervading dampness made the weights slimy and hard to control. The results were rather poor, but the competitors can take comfort in the fact that no performance made yesterday afternoon can be held to be representative of a man's ability.

The star of the afternoon was probably Bourdeau, who, in spite of the bad track, ran the hundred in 10 3-5 (Continued on page three)

Forum To Hear George Young

British M. P. Will Discuss Disarmament Question

George Young, distinguished British diplomatist, professor, historian and author will be the speaker at the first of the winter's series of Peoples' Forum lectures to be held tomorrow evening in the Church of the Messiah. His subject will be "Naval Disarmament and Freedom of the Seas."

In view of Premier Ramsay MacDonald's present visit to Washington this topic is of particular interest just now. Mr. Young brings a deep knowledge of international affairs to his address. He was head of the Chancery to Lord Bryce in Washington when all outstanding questions between Great Britain and the United States were cleared up and a whole series of treaties arranged, thereby putting Anglo-American relations on a footing which withstood the pressure of the whole war period. As a member of the British diplomatic service, Mr. Young has served with distinction and success at Washington, Athens, Constantinople, Madrid, Belgrade and Lisbon. While at Constantinople he published the "Cours de Droit Ottoman" (seven volumes in French) which is still the standard authority on Turkish law. He was made a member of the Victorian Order in recognition of his presence of mind when a bomb was thrown, with great loss of life, at the wedding procession of King Alfonso.

On leaving the diplomatic service in 1915 he joined the Labour Party and has since directed his brilliant gifts as a writer and platform speaker to the furtherance of the spirit and the purpose of the Labour program. He was the first civilian Englishman to enter Germany after the war and has made two visits to Russia since the Revolution. He was the first Russian Englishman to report on the Soviet System.

Lennoxville, Que., Oct. 4—Bishop's College was the scene of excitement when a fire broke out in the gymnasium shortly after 5.30 a.m. yesterday.

The blaze spread rapidly. Without the help of any fire department, the students picked their own leader, and fought the blaze for two hours. At 7.30 a.m. the fire was under control. The principal, Dr. A. H. McGreer, arrived on the scene shortly after the outbreak, and due to his efforts much damage was avoided.

The fire is thought to have been started by a cigarette butt carelessly flung aside by a guest at the introductory dance held in the gymnasium. Damage is estimated at $500.

SUMMER WORK

TO WHAT extent should students concern themselves with and take part in the affairs of the outside world? This question was put to a recent gathering of university students representing nearly all the colleges of Ontario and Quebec. The question followed upon a general agreement that students led a somewhat sheltered life. Most of those present deplored "cloistered" existence and tried to suggest way of overcoming it. A minority defended the student's isolation, and one man quoted the president of his own alma mater as being opposed to summer employment for students who were not obliged to earn money during the summer. Further discussion showed that most of those present thought that obtaining a job during the summer vacation was one of the most practical and most effective ways of avoiding a one-sided view of life while in college.

The approach to the problem of summer employment is for many students from quite a different point of view. There are not a few undergraduates who would not be at college at all if it were not for the money which they earned during the four or five months of the summer recess. Some pay the entire cost of their college course, but most of the summer workers contribute in larger or smaller amounts to the total cost, and the rest is borne, temporarily at least, by their parents.

Members of the Faculties of Science and Medicine have still another viewpoint of the summer work question, often in addition to the necessity of earning money. For these men, practical experience in the lines of work for which they are training is an integral part of their course, and they would find difficulty in obtaining their degree if they had not done at least the prescribed amount of practical work. The Meds are in and out of the hospitals daily in their upper years, and most of them put in a summer or two at the same work. Student miners and engineers cannot be in such close touch with their life's job during the session, but they all make up for it in the summer by handling a shovel or a surveyor's chain.

Probably many student workers have no one motive in taking a job. Many who are not seriously pressed for money would not know what to do with themselves if they were not gainfully employed. It is safe to say that at least fifty percent of the men undergrads at McGill work in the summer, earning money all of which, part of which, or none of which they use in defraying their college expenses.

The argument against students working in the summer is not entirely unreasonable, and the principle on which it is based seems to be traditional in the Orient and the British Isles, to mention two examples. But in Canada, the pretence of a student minding his own affairs and avoiding the distractions of everyday life could hardly be followed out in general. Current affairs and the realities of existence continually intrude. Lest he should even lose his balance to an even worse extent the student should take the attitude of trying to learn and understand life outside his own sphere. And one of the most obvious and elementary methods of doing this is to get a job in the summer.

STUDENT DORMITORIES

When and where are the student dormitories going to be built?

—McGill Gazette, 1875.

HISTORY repeats itself and so do students' slogans. The few words printed above were on the lips of men who are probably our grandfathers. Like father, like son may be all very well but the younger generation does not like being in the same atmosphere that pervaded in days of yore. The myth of the good old days has been exploded and the present is quite good enough and quite admirably for the present group of students.

In spite of students being ultra-modern they have not advanced one step farther than they, in the 75's, who said "When are we going to have student dormitories?" True it is not their fault that they have to reiterate an old slogan but it is equally as potent now as then. But what would have been ample accommodation for the past generations of students would be entirely inadequate for the present needs. Col. Bovey told us last night that even in his time, which we construe to have been not so very long ago, there were but fifteen in the graduating year.

Although the times and numbers have changed considerably the question of student dormitories is still as young as ever. It may be all very well to say that you know so and so because you went to college with him, but could you live with him. That is the crucial test. However strong may be the cohesion that exists in our university it cannot compare with those in which the students are resident. Boarding schools and prep schools have long been cognisant of the virtue of getting boys to live together, and the attitude which the residents hold to the town boys is not altogether snobbish.

At McGill there is only a fair proportion of students who may be called resident. We refer now to those fortunate enough to live in groups in fraternity houses and theological colleges around the campus. In such institutions there is some modicum of corporate life, and concerted action can be directed in any specific instance by appealing to the traditions of the house.

This is not to suggest that when the student dormitories do actually appear that they take the form of theological colleges and fraternity houses. Rather should they be such buildings as are imagined as dormitories and can be adaptable to students. May the spirit of our forefathers be carried to a successful end.

College Comment

WATER UNDER THE BRIDGE

As the class of 1933 enters college its members are reminded to what an extent modern practice has robbed education of its former terrors. The pace of the average freshman across the campus no longer bears any relation to that of the snail. Education has been made as painless as possible, in easing entrance requirements so as to admit the vast numbers who are now candidates for degrees in America, the college authorities have sacrificed scholarship, they have added to the adolescent's joy in life. Addressing the students of Columbia at the formal opening of its one hundred and seventy-sixth year, Dr. Butler reminded them of the gruelling entrance tests of fifty years ago. He was frank enough to say that not only could no member of the present student body meet those tests, but that no member of its faculty could. That does not mean that the human brain is no longer able to grasp such erudition. It is merely a comment on the changing standards.

In 1879 the Columbia freshman had to know Greek grammar and composition; four books of the Anabasis; three of the Iliad; Latin grammar and composition; seven books of Caesar's Commentaries; six books of the Aeneid and six orations of Cicero. In history, English, geography and mathematics the tests were equally severe. "Acute paralysis" would afflict modern youths faced with such tests, in Dr. Butler's opinion. But the same condition would probably have afflicted the youth of 1879 if there had not been unbroken centuries of so-called "humanities" drilled into their ancestors. It is another instance of adaptability to the times. And education, like fashion, has modes. The Harvard freshman of 1879 would have shuddered at the idea of a School of Business, but he was able to endure the thought of being defeated in athletics by Yale. The Harvard freshman of 1929 takes the School of Business in his stride, but when he sings "three cheers for Harvard, and down with Yale" he means it with all the fervor of his soul. Dr. Butler did not go into this phase of the development of American education, but doubtless it has manifested itself to him.

"SINE QUO NON"

"Without which—nothing." Thus may activities best be described. Without an active interest in something besides his studies, the freshman will become "stale." He will find himself filled with an increasing discontent. His aim in coming to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is to attain a broader understanding of the ways and means of meeting life, and he will fall far short of the mark.

Far be it from us to deprecate conscientious studying. After all, the essential reason for our presence here is to acquire book learning. That we take seriously our courses of study is absolutely necessary for the continuance of our stay. On it depends, to a considerable extent, our success in the life which follows college.

But why is it that employers insist on knowing before they hire a man in what activities he has become interested, and his success in them? Merely because it is on this basis that they judge his qualities as a leader of men. Inevitably a leader in a profession must be able competently to handle his assistants. If the graduate has amounted to something in college activities, he has proved his mettle in this respect.

The men who attended the freshman camp have learned something of the importance of activities. Go to any activity leader and ask him when he came really to appreciate Technology. The answer is the same always. He found that not until he was giving something to the Institute was he receiving anything from it. Then he became aware that activities mean a host of firm friends, mean helpful faculty contacts, mean in a broad sense, the complete life at Technology. elusive term at the Institute applied "Brown Bagger." That is an exclusive term at the Institute applied to the man who allows his studies to fill entirely his meager, narrow existence. It is a derisive term, a pitying expression for the poor man who refuses to realize the immense opportunities which would open with a little effort on his part.

Don't be a "Brown Bagger."

The Tech.

MORE TO BE PITIED

"The undergraduates are practically unanimous in the opinion that President Angell's views are absurd!" —Harvard Radcliffe, and Wellesley had plenty to say on the subject of college week ends, and most of it was neither complimentary or kind to President James Rowland Angell.

Such and many other quotations have filled the columns of the Metropolitan newspapers in the recent outbreak over the speech of President Angell before some 2500 students in Woolsey Hall, Thursday night. Perhaps more than any other one thing, it is an example of super-sensitive journalism with its ready eye for the unique detail or in this case the possible accusation.

The centrifugal force that for the present occupied the attention of the speaker, is essentially no other than the force which Harvard authorities have attempted to divert through the organization of living units, and through the enlargement of athletic facilities. The liberalism of Harvard authorities in such matters has not been questioned although in view of Yale's present attack of indignation it is the more to be wondered at.

Yale's move, no different than that of Harvard, has been distorted through the agent of a curious sensational press into an object of ridicule for which the unfortunate chance remark of President Angell can not be held solely responsible. This journalistic while he evokes the unimpeachable indignation of prattling flappers where a more fortunate representation might have conveyed a point of view that in its larger aspects can hardly be said to be unintelligent.

—Harvard Crimson

AUTHORITY TRIUMPHANT

Yesterday autos were here, today they have gone; that in a week is exemplified the change which the edict of the trustees accomplished in a year in 1927. But there is this significant difference: that two years ago great shout was raised against what the campus was pleased to call paternalism; but this year there is silence and compliance.

Doubtless there is regret at relinquishing such a convenience as one's own car, but in general it appears that the wisdom of the auto ban is recognized. It is likely that, considerable desultory week-ending and cruising has been thereby eliminated, and a potential cause of deaths has been greatly curbed. The number of colleges which have adopted such ruling since Princeton's action gives to it a popular acceptance.

Some Ups And Downs Of Fame

In 1843 a practically unknown man, George Borrow (1803-81), leaped into fame in England on the morning after the publication of his Bible in Spain. Although later there appeared worthy succeeding volumes, Lavengro (1851) and Romany Rye (1857), Borrow's fame died away so that the ninth edition of the Britannica (1875-1890) which appeared while he was alive does not contain his name. In the last edition of the Britannica Borrow receives such recognition as he had in 1850. I have seen three large biographies of Borrow in our library. There is a Borrow cult. There are Borrowians of whom I am one. On a later day I shall break out into praise of Borrow. Now I only look at the strange rise and fall and revival of the fame of this discoverer of gypsies.

II.

Or consider the case of Herman Melville (1819-91). In 1850 this man was in a position to assure the American public that they should see in Nathaniel Hawthorne a rising or a risen star. The public that had read with delight Melville's astonishing adventures and romances of the South Sea (Typee, Omoo) had to learn from him that there was a Hawthorne. But by degrees for some cause Melville's work fell into obscurity, perhaps because his later work fell into inferiority. He died in New York in 1891 nearly unknown and it is said quite embittered. But Melville was rediscovered by somebody and then by all the world. His better books appear in the Everyman's Library. He is again a recognized man of letters and he is known to millions of movie goers in the screen edition of Moby Dick, the Sea Beast.

III.

A dozen years ago I came upon a sentence from William James in which he speaks of William Henry Hudson (1841-1922) as a man who can write, with the can underscored. "Who is this," said I, "of whom William James says that?" So presently I was on the track of The Purple Land and other tales of South America, and then finally Green Mansions swam into my ken. I would have to be such an artist as Hudson to give my sense of the beauty of this book. What I now note is that most of Hudson's wonderful work was done long ago and far away, that for decades it was generally unnoticed—in two Encyclopaedias of 1890 his name is wanting—and that like Borrow and like Melville, Hudson has now regained what we think to be just recognition.

Borrow and Melville died in the grief of their eclipse. Hudson had the fortune to enjoy the return of the sun.

SALLY O'NEIL AT THE PRINCESS

Everybody likes to be reminded of their student days. In "The Sophomore," the all-talking feature film to be shown at the Princess theatre for one week, starting today, there is everything that could be desired to bring back memories of student life.

There is a human and charming romance in "The Sophomore," with the leading role played by Eddie Quillan and Sally O'Neil. As Margie Callahan, the little soda-fountain clerk, who agrees Joe Collins and who secretly pays his college tuition so that he can stay at the university and be near her, Miss O'Neil is declared to be tremendously appealing. Equally as fine a characterization is said to be given by Eddie Quillan as the college youth who has eyes only for the aristocratic Barbara, until his eyes are finally opened and he discovers what Margie really means to him.

The opening day of the new term at college; the first fraternity dance; the "gathering of the clan" at the campus sweet shop; the initiation of Mamma's Boy; the class play, the rally, and the big foot-ball game, they're all in "The Sophomore," realistically humorously pictured.

Eddie Quillan as Joe Collins goes into the big football game at the crucial moment and falls to save the game! In fact, on the very first play, after he has heroically dashed out to join his team, he has the wind knocked out of him and is carried off the field.

Other roles are enacted by Jeannette Loff, Russell Gleason, Stanley Smith, Lew Ayres, Jimmy Aldine, Sarah Padden and Marilyn Morgan.

Added attractions are "The Haunted House," an all-talking comedy creation; "Pathe News Review in Sound," and "Parlor Pest" all-talking comedy creation.

"JONESY" WILL BE THE ORPHEUM ATTRACTION

A diverting comedy of up-to-date American family life will be soon at the Orpheum next week, when "Jonesy," by Anne Morrison and John Peter Thoboy, will be presented at that theatre.

The comedy is founded upon a series of short stories by Mr. Thoboy appearing in an American magazine. The plot hangs around the fearful crush possessed by Wilbur Jones for Diana Devereaux, a crush that involves the whole family, Diana's relatives and even the neighbors and the town's two most prominent plumbers. Wilbur's mother and father learn of his infatuation for this "petress" and are exceedingly concerned. Mother lets Wilbur sleep tight through his luncheon date with Diana, and father meets the girl to warn her to stay away from their son!

Diana, being something of a plucky creature, comes to Wilbur's home to find out what it's all about. M. S. Jones adds her condemnation of the girl to the father's, and poor Diana is in tears when Wilbur bursts in. Later imagine the consternation of mother and dad when they learn that Diana is the niece of the town's most prominent man—a man dad Jones has been striving to get in touch with for months. Of course matters are straightened out by the time the third and last act arrives, but not until there has been much merriment for all.

THE GAYETY

Starting tomorrow night, the Gayety theatre will present an entire new burlesque show, entitled "Get Hot." Two of stageland's best-equipped burlesque artists head the roster, in the persons of Al Hillier, the popular Dutch dialect funster, and Joe Porto, the expert straight man. The pair work throughout the piece in a series of funny scenes one of them "We Americans," being a condensed version of their famous vaudeville satire of similar title. Dainty Alice Duval, a real blonde of the Allee White type, heads the important feminine element, and her dances are asserted to be in keeping with the show's title. Others who contribute mightily to "Get Hot" success are Gladys McCormick, a black-haired little ingenue of the flashy sort who darts in and out of many scenes, adding color and action to their playing; Billy Soslows, a singing and dancing juvenile, Vic Hallen whose eccentric comedy efforts dovetail nicely with the efforts of Hillier and Porto to amuse; Allene Rogers, a pert little ingenue and Kay Faiben, a soubrette who smilingly cavorts in a series of tensing numbers.

WE'VE HEARD THIS BEFORE

"Po's vaulters and high jumpers have better brains than their less athletic classmates, Prof. E. W. Gifford, curator of the museum of anthropology, has discovered.

"A test given by Professor Gifford to a graduate class disclosed that the three brightest students in the class were athletes. The three were Gene M. Stirling and W. W. 'Nibs' Hill, former pole vaulters on the track team, and Marlon Hollop, member of the women's team of America at Amsterdam last year and former St. athlete."

College Rugby Opens Today At Molson Stadium

McGill and Queen's Clash in First Scheduled Game

GRANGER QUARTER

Team Goes Through Snappy Drill in Preparation for Opening Tilt

One Minute Silence For Jimmy Douglas

In memory of Jimmy Douglas, coach of the University of Toronto football team, who died Thursday afternoon, flags at the Percival Molson Stadium will fly at half-mast and a one-minute silence will be observed before the start of the game today. Both teams and their supporters will stand at attention before the kick-off and honor the memory of the Miracle Man of Rugby whose death so seriously affected the hopes of the Toronto team.

A SHORT, snappy drill yesterday afternoon put the finishing touches on the senior rugby squad in preparation for today's struggle. All is set for the opening of the Intercollegiate season and if the redmen go like they did last night the outcome of the Queen's encounter should be a foregone conclusion. The men are in perfect shape and even in case of accidents Coaches Burridge and Hall have a strong line-up of substitutes to fill any gaps that may occur.

Granger will start at quarter in the position left vacant by Jack Brown and Holleran replaces Harry Church at left middle. Gerry Halpenny completes the list of newcomers to last year's championship twelve by stepping into Lovelings' old place at flying wing.

Captain Littlefield, Chick Church inside, George McTeer, Jack Holleran middle, Al Swaby snap, Don Young and Fred Urquhart at the outside wing positions give McGill a front line that has a slight edge over what Queen's call their heaviest line in years.

On the half line Smyth, Doherty and St. Germain though slightly lighter than the tricolor trio of Gilmore, Carter and Munro should make up for their lack of weight in superior speed. Smyth proved the sensation of the league last year and with a season's experience in Senior company is looked upon to perform even better than before.

Talpis, Kritzwiser, Munro, Nichol, Wilson, Jaquays and Chard will complete the line-up.

Despite the three days rain the field is in excellent condition and given the benefit of a dry wind this morning should present a good footing for the opposing half lines. The season tickets have been completely sold out and with clear weather the ticket office expects that the remainder of the stand will be completely filled.

Coach Batstone's proteges are reported to be confident of victory and ready to go. Whatever the outcome the fans can be sure of good football with both teams eager to open the season with a win.

The McGill Soccer team, famous for its successful performances in previous years are favored to win their first match of the season against the Royal Victoria Hospital at 4:15 today on the campus. Owing to the unfavorable weather conditions the players will probably find the going pretty heavy and it will be difficult to get away on the muddy ground.

Players who have not been physically examined should see Mr. Hay Finlay. The following players are asked to be on hand at 4:15 p.m.: — Goal Evelyn R.F.B. J. Harkness L.F.B. Jankun R.H.B. Owen C.H.B. Margaret Allen, of the S.C.A. of the R.V.C., will throw some light upon the functioning of the National Student Christian Movement of Canada.

Martyn Estail, President of the S.C.A. of McGill will open the conference with a few introductory remarks. A joint discussion of the phases of the work of the Association in which both men and women are directly interested will follow. This will include such matters as the Conversat and church services. In addition, members will be invited to submit suggestions which will enhance the value of the Association's program.

After this the S.C.A. of McGill and the S.C.A. of R.V.C. will convene in separate groups to consider proposed activities for the year which are peculiar to each. The men's section will spend considerable time discussing study groups from various angles. David Tough, 1st Vice-President, will give his ideas on the value of membership in a study group to start the proceedings. A number of prospective group leaders are to be present, and will outline the proposed study courses which they hope to take up during the coming year.

English Rugby Gets Under Way

McGill Meets M.A.A.A. in First League Match Today

LYMAN TROPHY

Return of Veteran Championship Players of Last Year Bolsters Squad

ENGLISH RUGBY PLAYERS NOTICE

The following men will please report at the M.A.A.A. Club House, St. Catherine St. West this afternoon at 1:45 sharp as the game is called for 2:15. Those who wish may meet at Strathcona Hall not later than 1:30 and go out in a body. Swoaters and stockings are supplied. Each man must bring the rest of his equipment. Further information may be had from G. F. Kincade, Plateau 7472 or J. G. Turner, Uptown 8731.

The McGill English rugby team, champions of the Intercollegiate League for the past three years, will open the 1929-30 season when they line up against the M.A.A.A. squad at 2:15 today on the latter's grounds. Although the red and white rugger players have had very little practice and lacked the services of a coach, those who have watched the men working out feel confident that they will prove tough opposition to the Peel St. Club gridlers.

Amongst the experienced players of previous seasons are Captain Kincade, Nelson, Langsworth, Rice, Chalmers, Hart, Grimes, Guenne, Gibson, Luke and Skinner. In addition to these veterans some promising new material has been discovered. Fogarty, Price, Hatfield, Boright, and Close look best among the newcomers.

The game this afternoon is a regular league fixture in competition for the Lyman Trophy. The league is composed of M.A.A.A., Bank of Montreal, Westward, Vickers and McGill. The winners of the league will play off with the Maritime champions for the McTier Trophy, emblematic for the English Rugby championship of Eastern Canada.

With the return of the old stars combined with the promising newcomers who are filling the gaps, it seems as though this year's aggregation will measure up to the standard of McGill rugger team of the last few years.

The redmen are expected to line up as follows:—Nelson, Fogarty, Robertson, Grimes-Graeme, Hart, Chalmers, Rice, Langsworth, Gibson, Hatfield, Boright, Skinner, Charlewood, Price, Hanbury and Luke.

Several newcomers caught the eye in spite of the general depression. In the discus throw, Howlett turned in a performance of 97 feet, a really good throw under the circumstances. A. Grieco competed in several events and, with more meets under his belt he should show great improvement. Hammond did great work in his heat in the hundred and should also be heard from again. Another newcomer, showed considerable class in the weight events, when G. Painter won the javelin and the shot and paced in the discus throw.

University of West Virginia Held Physical Examination

Morgantown, West Virginia, October 5.—Freshmen women were found to be in much better physical condition than the freshmen men, according to the physical examinations given students last week, at West Virginia University, Dr. W. H. McGaw, infirmary physician, stated approximately four hundred men, and two hundred women were examined.

A great number of the students examined needed minor surgical attention, Dr. McGaw said. Several students were found to have had heart conditions, and have been put under special care of the University physicians. Statistics show that a great number need dental attention. The

Give Courses In Aero Mechanics

Carnegie Limits Number of Students to 50

Pittsburgh, Pa.—October 5.—The Carnegie Institute of Technology offer this Fall for the first time short courses in Aviation Mechanics. These new courses, which will be given both in the day and night classes, are in addition to the regular four-year course leading to a B. S. degree in Aeronautical Engineering which was established a year ago.

The courses are planned for men who have had successful mechanical experience and applicants for the day courses must be graduates of an approved trade or high school. The classes, both day and night will be limited to 50 students and the directors have announced that the students will be carefully selected. Each of the classes of 50 will be divided into two sections.

The courses in Aviation Mechanics will consist of both laboratory and lecture room study and will prepare the students for ground work. The courses will include nomenclature and theory of flight, plane repair and assembly, aviation woodworkings, and welding, motor tuning and instruments, electricity and navigation.

No actual instruction will be given in flying but students desiring to learn to fly will be directed to an approved school. Only those schools of flying will be approved by the Aeronautical Engineering Department of the Carnegie Institute of Technology which have met all requirements of the United States Department of Commerce, and whose training planes, pilots qualifications, and flying fields, have been inspected and found satisfactory to a member of the faculty of the aeronautics department. Students desiring to take up flying are advised to secure the consent of their parents or guardian, and of the head of their department at Carnegie Tech.

Equipment for both the aeronautical engineering course and the aviation mechanic's course is being steadily augmented. A single-engine, PW-8 training plane is already on its way from the Fairfield Depot of the Army Air Corps.

rather than with the weeping gang," suggested Boyd Millen, President of the Students' Society, in a call for support of the students' council during the coming session. He officially welcomed the freshmen to the university.

Colonel Bovey warned the freshmen not to become too much involved in parties in their first year at college. "Go in for sports and support your societies," he said. "Keep up the McGill spirit and we need not take a back seat with any university."

Phil Mathams, editor-in-chief of the Daily, presented himself as one who was a well-rounded student after five years at McGill. He asked for a response from the student body in the form of new reporters and expressions of opinion in the correspondence column.

"They are a great bunch to work with," said coach Burridge, referring to the football squad. "The team is good; there is no doubt about it." "Charlie" Littlefield, captain of senior football, called for support from the rooters. "It means just as much to McGill to have you playing the game on the stands as to have you playing it on the field."

McGill's facilities for training in track and field events are some of the best in the country, in the opinion of Coach Van Wagner, who invited all who were interested in the sport for competition or exercise. A fine track, a fully-equipped house — "even soap and towels" — were at the disposal of the students.

According to Ray Rahmanop, track captain, the team is determined to keep the intercollegiate cup at McGill for another year.

The freshmen were giving several demonstrations of Max Ford's abilities as a choir leader and college songs were accompanied with Lawrence Hart at the piano. Max also introduced a new song for championship activities if the football honors go to McGill this year.

Entertainment was provided by Louis Scott-Moncrieff, who sang two songs, and Mr. Williams who demonstrated his progress as a magician. E. C. Amaron, at one time a prominent student at McGill led in "Alouette".

B. K. Martin, President of the Union, presided and introduced the speakers. "My poor man, you have seen better days?" "Ya, madam, I bane wan tam France Charming to many woman." "Oh! You were a war hero?" "Naw, I ban a moova haro before the darn talkies cam."

nearly all McGill Professors or graduates. It consists of Professors Herbert Tate and Coote, Colonel Thompson, H. A. Cotman, and Arnold Heene who graduated in Law last year; also Roy Campbell of the University of Toronto.

The undertaking is a co-operative effort on the part of the bodies already named in connection with McGill University and the Mechanics Institute. Walter Molson a graduate of McGill is chairman of the committee in charge of the direction of the courses. Colonel Bovey head of the Department of Extra-Mural Relations at McGill is director of the courses.

The gimlet-eyed man, given to propounding conundrums, sprang a new one on some of his friends the other day.

"What," he asked, "is three-seventh of chicken, two-thirds of cat, and one-half of goat?"

It was, of course, given up.

"Well," said the man, triumphantly, "the answer's Chicago. 'Chi' is three-sevenths of chicken; 'ca' is two-thirds of cat, and 'go' one-half of goat."

Whereupon they threw him out on his car—New York Evening Post.
